Keeping in Touch with Kansans

Each year, I travel thousands of miles throughout Kansas in an effort to stay in touch with the people I represent. I learn something from each of my community visits and in every conversation I have.

Since coming to Congress, I have kept a map in my Hays District office to keep track of all the communities I visit and events I attend each year. I am now able to share my map electronically with you so that you can see the places I have been in Kansas most recently.

If you are interested in learning more about my travels across our state, I invite you to sign up for my weekly e-mail update, This Week in Congress. This weekly newsletter is a helpful way to stay informed about my travels in Kansas, as well as my activities in Washington, D.C.
