Megan Dwyer of Lyons Serves as Congressional Intern in Moran's Washington, D.C. Office

LYONS - Congressman Jerry Moran today announced that Megan Dwyer is serving as a congressional intern in his Washington, D.C., office. Dwyer is a 2005 graduate of Lyons High School.

"I am always impressed when I see young people who have a desire to serve their state and country," Moran said. "Megan is doing good work for Kansans and learning firsthand how concerns are addressed in our nation's capital."

Dwyer will be a senior at Kansas State University this fall where she is studying history and psychology. At K-State, she is a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority where she serves as Director of Standards and Ethics and Director of Public Relations. She is also on the advisory board of the student-run philanthropy K-State Proud, which helps K-State students meet the costs of a college education. After graduating, she plans to do community development work.

"This is a great opportunity to see the legislative process firsthand and deal directly with Kansans and lawmakers," Dwyer said. "I feel fortunate to work in an office where Kansans and the issues they care about are always the first priority."

In the office, Dwyer assists Moran with legislative and administrative duties on behalf of the people of Kansas.

Megan is the daughter of Kevin and Teri Dwyer of Lyons.
